Thanks to the National Children's Alliance, CAM was awarded a Chapter Innovation Grant. The focus of this grant is to provide the opportunity for mental health professionals in Montana to become certified in the Trauma Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy modality.

Trauma-Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (TF-CBT) was developed by Drs. Anthony Mannarino, Judith Cohen and Esther Deblinger. TF-CBT is an evidence-based treatment that has been evaluated and refined during the past 25 years to help children and adolescents recover after trauma. Currently, 14 randomized controlled trials have been conducted in the U.S., Europe and Africa, comparing TF-CBT to other active treatment conditions. All of these studies have documented that TF-CBT was superior for improving children's trauma symptoms and responses. TF-CBT is a structured, short-term treatment model that effectively improves a range of trauma-related outcomes in 8-25 sessions with the child/adolescent and caregiver. "Why Become Certified?" Statewide CAC Directors and MDT Coordinators Meeting

Last week, the Children's Justice Bureau's MCSART Program and CAM hosted the first meeting and training of the Directors of the Children's Advocacy Centers and the Coordinators of MDTs in Montana.

Chris Newlin, Executive Director of the National Children's Advocacy Center, presented to the group on Recent Research Affecting Child Abuse Investigations, the Value and Impact of the Children's Advocacy Center Model, and the Importance of State Chapters. Chris is a national and international presenter and provided information that will help move Montana teams and CACs forward. Thank you Chris.

Sarah Corbally, Division Administrator, Child and Family Services and Tara Harris, former Lewis and Clark County Prosecutor, provided training on the importance of MDTs and CACs from the prosecution and child and family services perspective. Dana Toole, Bureau Chief, Children's Justice Bureau presented on topics regarding confidentiality of records and DVDs and the important of MDTs and CACs to establish interagency agreements and protocols. Dana Geary, DEC Coordinator for the Montana Department of Justice distributed resources and discussed the statewide DEC program. Tina Chamberlain, Program Specialist from the Montana Board of Crime Control attended and discussed potential support through VOCA Funding.

In addition, each CAC and MDT was given the opportunity to showcase their programs and discuss innovative practices and approaches they have developed as well as discuss the vital support they receive from the Children's Justice Bureau. The overall consensus is that none of these programs would be operational or as effective without the support of MCSART.

The meeting also provided networking opportunities for those professionals in leadership positions within their community to establish relationships and mentoring opportunities. There were CAC Directors and MDT Coordinators representing 17 counties and Victim Specialists from the FBI who coordinate teams on 3 reservations who attended. Thank you to all who attended for taking the time to participate. There were numerous professionals who could not attend. To all of you – Thank you for the tireless work you do every day. A special thank you to all of the professionals that work on the MDTs throughout Montana -- without you, children would not have a voice -- they would not have justice and they would not have the help they need to heal.

Each year, the National Indian Child Welfare Association (NICWA) hosts the largest national gathering on American Indian and Alaska Native child advocacy issues. With over 800 attendees, this three-day conference attracts attention across North America, creating a space where participants can learn about the latest information across Indian Country in child welfare.

NICWA is excited to announce that our 33rd Annual Protecting Our Children National American Indian Conference on Child Abuse and Neglect will be taking place in NICWA's hometown, Portland, Oregon, on April 19–22, 2015. Conference attendees are a cross-section of experts including child welfare, mental health, and juvenile justice service providers; legal professionals; students; advocates for children; and tribal and federal leaders.

This year's conference theme is "Healing from Trauma: Supporting Native Communities, Family, and Children." It is intended to help attendees better understand cultural, historical, intergenerational, and current trauma in Indian Country with the goal of supporting Native communities, families, and children in a process of healing.

About Our Conference Theme

Healing from Trauma: Supporting Native Communities, Families, and Children

Trauma in Indian Country takes many forms: cultural, historical, intergenerational, and current. Each affects the lives and well-being of American Indian and Alaska Native (AI/AN) communities, families, and children in distinct ways. The effects of trauma on AI/AN people include high rates of substance misuse and mental health disorders, which in turn lead to violence, child maltreatment, juvenile delinquency, incarceration, and cycles of poverty. Trauma affects the health of a community and the child-serving systems within it. Yet, Native communities are creating effective approaches to facilitate identification of trauma and healing.

Trauma is defined by the Centers for Disease Control as "an event, or series of events, that cause moderate to severe stress reactions. Traumatic events are characterized by a sense of horror, helplessness, serious injury, or the threat of serious injury or death...affecting those who suffer injuries or loss." Healing from trauma is a complex and often difficult process. Strengths-based, trauma-informed, community level child- and family-serving systems of care are an important resource to AI/AN children and families who have faced trauma. These systems do more than target presenting problems. These systems realize the impact of trauma; fully integrate knowledge about trauma into policies, procedures, and practices; and actively resist re-traumatization. Strengths-based, trauma-informed, community-level child- and family-serving systems of care build strength, resilience, and well-being through sovereignty and self-determination. It is important for individuals, families, and communities to come together to support each other in a process of healing by creating these systems.

This year's conference will focus on creating trauma-informed systems; promoting resilience; and supporting AI/AN children, families, and communities in the process of healing from trauma.

The Midwest Regional CAC will be hosting two online courses this Spring for Sexual Assault Nurse Examiners (SANEs).

Adult/Adolescent Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner (ASANE)

The ASANE course is recommended for medical professionals who interested in performing sexual assault evaluations. This course specifically addresses topics related to adolescent and adult sexual assault victims including evidence collection, exam techniques and treatment for STIs and working with the investigating agencies.

Accreditation Boot Camp

learn the accreditation process, from application to site review

August 25 - 26

This training is for CACs who are applying for accreditation and re-accreditation for membership to the National Children's Alliance as well as preparing for their on-site review. CACs should be at least six to eighteen months away from submitting their application. Register.

Medical Training Academy/Legal Training Academy: CONCURRENT COURSE

November 5 - 7

Target Audience: This concurrent training is designed for healthcare providers (physicians, nurse practitioners, sexual assault nurse examiners and physician assistants) who provide medical evaluations for suspected victims of child abuse and prosecutors or child protection attorneys handling criminal or civil cases of child abuse. This training is not intended for nurses or other healthcare providers whose role is to assist the examiner

Medical Training Academy: The healthcare providers' role in the MDT-CAC model as well as the medical evaluation of child sexual abuse and physical abuse will be presented. Case-based scenarios will be used to facilitate discussion of significance of findings and documentation. The process of preparing for court will be presented by a prosecuting attorney followed by a mock court session in conjunction with attendees of Legal Training Academy.

Legal Training Academy: Basic medical information commonly encountered in child abuse cases will be presented by a child abuse pediatrician. A prosecuting attorney will discuss how the medical information can be used in the preparation for court cases and describe strategies for meeting with medical witnesses and preparing for defense experts. The course will conclude with a mock trial workshop involving teams of medical and legal participants.

Preference will be given to multi-disciplinary team (medical providers and attorney from same jurisdiction) applications, however individuals can register to attend either track. To register as a team (medical provider and attorney), register the first person as the primary registrant then click on guest to register the second person. Register now.

On-Site Forensic Interview Peer Review

Forensic interviewing is a core service of a CAC and an important component for every MDT. Much research has been done in the field of child interviewing. Research tells us that interview protocols and intense forensic interview training are essential for professionals conducting forensic interviews. The research also tells us that while both are essential and important neither change an interviewer's behaviors. Peer Review is necessary to maintain optimal interviewer practice

Lamb, M.E., Sternberg, K., Orbach, Y., Esplin, P. & Mitchell, S. (2002) Is Ongoing Feedback Necessary to Maintain The Quality of Investigative Interviews With Allegedly Abused Children? Applied Developmental Science 2002, Vol. 6, No. 1, 35-41

Results indicate that appropriately trained interviewers can help children of all ages to provide the specific details often necessary to ensure successful prosecution.

Brubacher, S. P., Malloy, L. C., Lamb, M. E., & Roberts, K. P. (2013). How do interviewers and children discuss individual occurrences of alleged repeated abuse in Forensic Interviews? Applied Cognitive Psychology, 27(4), 443-450.

On-Site Peer Review for your MDT is available— MCSART has funding to send an experienced Forensic Interviewer to your community to conduct forensic interview peer review with your forensic interviewers and MDT members. Contact me for a request form.

Research results indicate that appropriately trained interviewers can help children of all ages to provide the specific details often necessary to ensure successful prosecution.

The ROLE OF FEMALE PIMPS and HUMAN TRAFFICKING RESOURCES

"But while victims of trafficking are gaining increased attention, relatively little attention has been paid to the role of pimps in this process. A recent article published in the Journal of Interpersonal Violence, and entitled "The Sexual Exploitation of Girls in the United States: The Role of Female Pimps," is one of the few out there that tackles this subject. The article points to an area deserving of further research and exploration since, as the authors state, "[u]nderstanding pimps, their role, and the source of their power over victims is an important part of combating CSEC." Id., p. 2.

To do so, the researchers used a "database of all adults charged with crimes related to CSEC throughout the United States in federal, state, and local courts ... on all cases between 2002 and 2009." Id., p. 5. The researchers found that "[o]f the 70 women in the database involved in cases as traffickers/pimps, searches of LexisNexis, Westlaw, and Google resulted in 49 complete case files" which they then used to "analyze data and to provide a descriptive picture of female pimps, their relationships with minor victims, and to compare female pimps with their male co-defendants." Id. Using this information, the researchers identified five female pimp typologies exemplified in the 49 cases. These include:

1. Madam/Business Partner: 7 of the 49 cases demonstrated this role
2. Family: 3 cases demonstrated this role
3. "Girilla": Defined as "illustrating a unique typology of intra-gender violence commonly found in female-to-female sex trafficking relationships," this role was typified by 19 of the 49 women.
4. Handler: This role "involves what has traditionally been considered trafficking behavior, including recruitment, harboring, and transportation of victims," and was demonstrated in 11 of the cases.
5. Bottom: This title is "used to describe a woman who works for or with a pimp who earned additional responsibilities including befriending other girls and recruiting them for the pimp," and was demonstrated by 9 of the cases. Id., pp. 9-13.

The researchers compared sentences both between female and male pimps, and among the categories of female pimps. Not surprisingly, judges issued "significantly shorter incarceration sentences for female traffickers overall.... However, there is little guidance available to courts and practitioners who are faced with the unique challenge of determining the culpability of female traffickers who were themselves, in some cases, violently exploited by their male co-defendants, particularly those categorized as "Bottoms.'" Id., p. 14.

By studying the role of female pimps, and by encouraging others to do the same, the researchers hope to "reveal nuances in culpability, which presently indicates the need for more flexible laws. For example, most jurisdictions do not acknowledge a defense of duress ... even in cases where the female trafficker was coerced to act by a male trafficker for fear of harm to herself or her immediate family and has limited or no opportunity to escape the situation." Id. Further research and understanding will provide guidance not only to courts, but also to the range of practitioners in the field to understand treatment options – and to prevent recidivism and revictimization. I urge you to download this article and share it with your teams and your colleagues in the community. If we work together, we can eliminate this form of bondage.

As always, I thank you for reading, and for all that you do on behalf of the children you serve.

Warm regards,"

Teresa Huizar, Executive Director, National Children's Alliance
